I can find almost nothing about the 1991 movie Gross Out, which is arriving on DVD courtesy MVD, but I'm totally intrigued by its pedigree: Bill Osco, who shot one of the first feature-length adult films, Mona, back in the early '70s and later went on to produce Flesh Gordon, The Being, and Night Patrol (!), was behind the camera, and his Blood Diner collaborator Carl Crew (later Jeffrey Dahmer in The Secret Life) wrote the script. Apparently, it's about a crazy old lady who charges her three insane children to shoot a movie that will make her vomit. No kidding.
