Black Metal Satanica

It is rare for me to watch a metal documentary and get the willies, but that is exactly what happened when I watched Black Metal Satanica. BMS is a documentary which digs deep in to the black metal scene in Norway and Sweden and gives great insight in to what makes these bands tick as well as what sometimes motivates them to kill someone or in some instances, themselves. The documentary gives the origins of black metal and where the music came from. As you will see in this great documentary, Black Metal is based around Viking Folklore and the resentment of Christianity. It is a haunting documentary that chronicles the antics of bands like Mayhem and Burzum and their involvement in murders and church burnings. The documentary is full of great interviews from some of the more popular bands of the genre. It is shot well and will keep you on the edge of your seat. Even if you don't like the music, this is a great documentary that will keep you intrigued from start to finish.

Bottom Line: An excellent documentary which truly exposes the Black Metal music scene for what it is as well as giving insight on the bands that create it. You might want to watch this one with the lights on.

Ragman is searching for his night light.
