Marillion's Somewhere In London DVD coming in August!

Folk-prog band Marillion has been a British rock institution for over a quarter-century, yet remains one of the island's most overlooked musical imports. On August 5, 2008 our friends at Music Video Distributors hope to remedy this situation with their release of the two-DVD set Somewhere In London.

Filmed during the final two nights of Marillion's Somewhere Else album tour in June 2007 at the London Forum, the Somewhere In London DVD set provides the viewer with a full concert film experience. The film soundtrack is offered in both stereo and 5.1 mix, and the DVDs features 15 live songs. Bonus material includes an exclusive tour rehearsal from Marillion's Racket Club studio. If you haven't discovered this phenomenal band, perhaps it's time that you should!

Labels: DVD, Marillion
