

'In Hollywood,' Half Pint (MVDvisual)

This early summer DVD has lain dormant long enough, but like many Americans whose interest in reggae drastically declined after the death of Bob Marley, it didn't draw my attention.

Pint actually sings, the "cinematography" of this feature is positively off-putting. "Half Pint in Hollywood" and Half Pint's Web site appear at the bottom of the screen almost constantly, and four images juxtaposed with quick cuts will probably disorient all but the most mellow viewers. It's impossible to recommend this one.

Ricky Flake