Citizen Fish: Underwater Overground / Gaffer Tape DVD
DIY comes to DVD

Citizen Fish, for the uninitiated, are what most of the Subhumans (the UK variety rather than the Canadian one) do when they're not being Subhumans, and jolly good they are too, in a sort of ska-punk-but-totally-different-to-the-way-everyone-else-does-it vein. This here is a mixture of their previously-released tour film "Gaffer Tape" from 2000 and a brand new one called "Underwater Overground", plus absolutely oodles of extras that makes most other bands releasing DVDs look like a bunch of skinflints.

The 'Fish, and indeed their aforementioned almost-alter-ego, despite their fairly extensive musical legacies are still proudly DIY and are still regarded very highly among the underground scenes across the world – in fact, I'm hard pressed to think of many other bands they can be compared with in this respect – and as such this makes for rather more enjoyable viewing than the average disc featuring egocentric rockers in their backstage area farting into microphones and running rings round their tour managers like a bunch of hyperactive teenagers.

No, this is a real road movie (or rather two) featuring the actual band driving, carrying equipment, playing their music and being themselves all around the globe. There's no narration, rather a few glimpses of life on tour followed by half a song – the pace is never slow (reflecting life on tour I
