A BRIDE hoped to thrill her wedding guests by having her bouquet tossed from a small microlight plane, but the stunt nearly ended in death when the flowers caused the aircraft to crash.

The bizarre accident happened when the flowers got sucked into the helicopter-like autogiro's engine, triggering a fire and explosion.

The wedding guests — including the single females hoping to catch the bouquet signifying they'd be the next to wed — watched in horror as the flaming aircraft then plunged into the woods near the Italian town of Suvereto in Tuscany.

The plummeting plane narrowly missed slamming into a hostel housing 50 kids.

Incredibly, the 61-year-old pilot Luciano Nannelli escaped the crash without a scratch.

The bouquet-thrower, Isidoro Pensieri, 44, also survived, but suffered two broken legs and head injuries. He was rushed for treatment to a hospital in Pisa.

"It certainly left the wedding guests open-mouthed," says Pensieri, "but not for the expected reason."
