Gold: Before Woodstock. Beyond Reality (1972) (MVD Visual) - *Not to be confused with the actual Woodstock film — or any of the umpteen million other movies called Gold, for that matter.* And, finally, after having explored such sensitive subjects as religion, oppression, the Army, and foreigners, it's time to look at those bloody hippies. And, in Gold: Before Woodstock. Beyond Reality, you get to look at a lot of hippies — many of whom are completely naked. A commune of flower people set up camp in a rural, old-west community, causing the local lawman (Garry Goodrow) to become very upset — as these long-haired freaks are threatening to enlighten his perfect backwoods world. Or something like that. To be honest, I think the drugs they used to make this film actually managed to get into my system with this one — thirty-eight years after the fact.

Oh, well. I'm just gonna enjoy this trip, then. So, that's all from me.

Happy viewing, kids!
