

Racing Cars

"76-06, 30th Anniversary Concert"

(Angel Air Waves)

By: Paul Autry

Racing Cars got stuck with the dreaded "one hit wonder" label. But, here they are, thirty years later, and they've got a new release out and even though I'm not really a fan, this concert performance was rather interesting to watch because it was set up more like a movie. The camera work is excellent and it takes you right up on stage so you can get up close and personal with the band as they go through their sixteen song set. They're not exactly a flashy band and it seems to me that they would much rather let the music do the talkin'...and that's exactly what they do here. It's a good, strong, solid performance. There's some additional bonus footage that's worth watching as well. I was especially interested in the interview with Def Leppard's Joe Elliott, who sits down to share his thoughts and opinions on the band. That was probably the most entertaining part for me. Bottom line...if you're a Racing Cars fan, this is a DVD that you'll want to add to your collection because they did it up right. You won't be disappointed.
