

It is amazing how fast CHAMPIAN FULTON's "The Breeze and I" (spectrarecords.com), a collection of jazz standards, became a stalwart in our household. When we have dinner parties (and yes, we do; one can live on punk friends alone, but we don't), we put this on. And every single time, at least one person is bound to ask about the disc. Fulton has a lovely voice and rocks a fine piano on classics like "The Sheik of Araby," "The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else," "Say It Isn't So," "Easy to Love," "My Heart Stood Still," "If I Had You," and of course the title piece, among others. There are a fine mix of instrumentals and vocal pieces, all done with full heart.
