Mods & Rockers.

"The Mods & Rockers Film Festival is getting real," writes Steve Hochman in the Los Angeles Times. "After seven years of emphasizing the fantasy and frivolity of the 60s... co-founder, producer and host Martin Lewis has put together a series this year that highlights some of the era's top music documentarians."

John Patterson, too, is glad to see the fest "shed its 007-inspired side." He elaborates in the LA Weekly:

Mods & Rockers has always been predicated upon the rich pop-cultural exchanges and transfusions that were effected in the 1960s between swinging, mod-pop London and hippie-trippy California, London having been the cultural capital of the decade until early 1967, when it was briefly superseded by Haight-Ashbury. But Los Angeles was always waiting in the wings as hippiedom's Second City (although musically, LA always kicked SF's ass!). This year, that rich cultural seam is once again successfully strip-mined, with an emphasis largely, by hazard or design, on the westward movement from London to the Golden State.

Then: "If forced to choose a single exemplary movie from this teeming cornucopia, I'd make it Tony Palmer's legendary BBC documentary All My Loving."
