

Also new from MVD Visual...

Tony Palmer's "All My Loving" was originally released on the BBC in 1968 to explain the rapidly growing generation gap and the seemingly "out there" new breed of bands cropping up. The narrative is a bit dated but the interviews and live footage with groups like Pink Floyd, The Animals, The Who and Jimi Hendrix make this watchable, if not essential viewing.

- David Mansdorf