

TONY PALMER'S ALL MY LOVING

Voiceprint (DVD)

4 Stars ****

Tony Palmer's documentary of pop music from the late 1960's swinging London is a cool look at the dawn of England's golden era of rock and roll, moving from beat music to psychedelic pop.

Unfortunately the director's want to include social and political commentary within the context of the documentary is completely inept, but the footage and interviews are so amazing with video clips from the Beatles, Jimi Hendrix, The Who, Donovan and others that you don't really pay attention.
