Tony Palmer's "All My Loving" screenings, DVD

Tony Palmer's All My Loving is a 1967 film made for the BBC and acknowledged to be the first film to bring the wilder elements of 1967 pop music onto the British public. Previously, the mainstream British TV viewing public had held a cuddly fascination with 60s British pop bands, thanks mainly to The Beatles, Herman's Hermits, Peter & Gordon, The Searchers and others.

But All My Loving served as a wake-up call to the stylistic and cultural changes that pop music was undergoing.

Press release: "All My Loving is Tony Palmer's groundbreaking documentary on music and its effect on pop culture in the late '60s, with previously unseen footage from The Beatles, Cream, Jimi Hendrix, The Who, Pink Floyd and many more. Produced and initially broadcasted in 1968, this compelling documentary is just as pertinent and relevant as ever. Now for the first time, this 60 minute BBC Film is available on home video."

Tony Palmer: "It was John Lennon's idea - the film. He said to me: 'you've got to do something to get these guys exposure on television. They're hammering at the door, except that the guys on the inside are deaf, and probably dumb & blind as well.' So I did, and All My Loving was the result. Even using the title was his suggestion. It cause a hell of a stir, but then I suspect he knew it would."
