SURF STRONGER

Surf Stronger

After a solid debut last year, and the 2008 follow-up Surf Stronger-Core Training, the Surf Stronger crew has established themselves as an authority on wide-ranging surf fitness and conditioning. The program's led by seasoned strength and conditioning specialist Scott Adams and is broken into two workouts (a "Main Workout" and a "Core Workout"). Running through the workout with Adams onscreen is none other than fitness specimen and WCT standout Serena Brooke. Not to mention, adding to the presentation, there's a groovy original soundtrack and surf footage interspersed with the fitness routines. So check it out, and start maximizing your time in the water with time spent out of the water.—M.F.

DAFT PUNK'S ELECTROMA

Vice

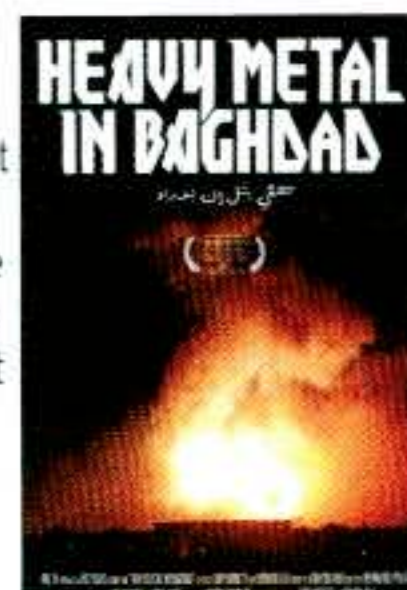

Ride along with two robots (Daft Punk) as they travel across the American landscape in a quest to become human. This desolate but beautiful journey takes the two robot journeymen into various "Anytown, USA" locales, only to find more robots of varying indifference. Pairing a gorgeous cinematic look with an intriguing soundtrack, this film will be a hit in any household that enjoys strange trippy films like Pink Floyd's The Wall, or Twin Peaks' Fire Walk With Me. You will definitely get a weird vibe when watching this one, and that is a good thing if you like to feel weird—I know I do.—C.C.

HEAVY METAL IN BAGHDAD

Vice Films

Vice Films has been following an Iraqi heavy-metal band for the last three years and have finally released a full-length documentary about what the life of a band in the world's most f-ked up country is really like. The band had to power their amps with gasoline generators and had to carry guns to make sure they could survive band practice. Building a band during a war must be hard, but they did it, and they rip. The best part about Acrassicauda (the black scorpion) is that the band's music isn't about war and politics, it's just good-ass heavy metal—it just happens to be played by four young friends in the middle of a hellish war zone. This is a must-see film. F-k the war, let's rock!—C.C.

AN EVENING OF YES MUSIC PLUS

Anderson, Bruford, Wakeman, Howe MVD

Yes is definitely one of the stranger bands on Earth. In the 70s, they were known as an experimental prog-rock band with a penchant for twenty-minute operatic songs featuring virtuosic solos on guitar, keyboards, and syths. They do have some hits, like "Roundabout," "I've Seen All Good People," and "Long Distance Runaround"—all of which are amazing songs. This DVD shows just how strange the band actually is. They dress like medieval wizards and their stage show is like a fantasy storybook dream. If you like Yes, buy this; if you don't, I don't know what to tell you.—C.C.

SEA FEVER: AN IRISH SURF ODYSSEY

Sea Fever Productions

While numerous Ireland-based articles and photos have been popping up for some time now, Sea Fever is the first surf movie that truly documents the history and growth of surfing in Ireland. Not to be confused with a high-action irip tear lacerate flick, Sea Fever takes a pulled-back and reflective look the Irish surfing scene while focusing on a spot called Aileens big, deep water tow-in spot that routinely dishes up massive surf below sheer 700-foot cliffs. As it is not something to pop into your DVD player for a quick, pre-shred sesh amp up, the preferred method of watching Sea Fever would be done on a cold night while sipping Irish whiskey in front of a roaring fire.—Justin Coté
