The lowdown: A documentary that looks at the issues of injuries and safety in the National Football League as well as the league's attitude toward retired players, many of whom suffer from debilitating injuries received during their playing days.

The film examines the lack of support for disabled, disadvantaged and disenfranchised former NFL players.

One of the movie's producers is Roman Phifer, an assistant coach with the Denver Broncos.

Among the players and coaches interviewed are Mike Ditka, Tony Dorsett and Willie Wood.

The movie's digital transfer is sharp.
