FAR OUT

life on & after the commune

Far Out: life on & after the commune tells the story of two rural New England communal farms founded in 1968 by a group of young, radical journalists from the Liberation News Service (LNS), tracing fifty years in the lives of a like-minded group of writers, activists and artists. It conveys not only how these “hippies” transformed Vermont and Western Massachusetts, but also how rural life and the people they met changed them.

Featuring archival footage and contemporary interviews with members of the communes, Far Out paints an intimate portrait of how this group of artists and activists dealt with the pressing issues of the day — gay and women’s rights, sexual freedom, nuclear power, raising children, the role of the family — and the realities of life, relationships and money in an anarchic communal setting.
