Live Noize

Tour with Public Enemy filmed at Irvine Meadows Amphitheatre in Southern California circa 1991.

After ten years of playing the globe and millions of records sold New York's premier metal band ANTHRAX united with rappers PUBLIC ENEMY for the first tour of its kind. Through this tour ANTHRAX broke down barriers which other acts wouldn't even undertake. It was the most exciting tour of their career, and this video is a documentation of just that. In the summer of 1991, ANTHRAX made musical history by collaborating with PUBLIC ENEMY on one of the most renowned singles of recent times. BRING THE NOISE captured rap, alternative and heavy metal radio. The success of that single prompted these two bands to become co-headliners in the BRING THE NOISE tour. The result was a groundbreaking bill that brought together diverse fans from different musical backgrounds. Filmed at Irvine Meadows Amphitheatre in Southern California LIVE NOIZE captures ANTHRAX' performance during that tour. The show incorporates approximately one hour of live performance with back stage footage that includes PUBLIC ENEMY. The encore is an extended rockin' version of BRING THE NOISE, metal and rap at last fusing into a seamless whole. Includes band interviews covering the early years of Anthrax.
